

cooperative play. Form of play in which preschoolers join together to play a group activity.

developmentally appropriate activities. Activities that take into account the level of physical, social, emotional, and intellectual development of children at certain ages.

house rules. Specific rules that apply to the family's household and the members who live there.

parallel play. Toddlers that play near each other, but not with each other.

privileges. Rights to certain benefits.